

New Student Info: Fall 2022 Course Plans (what to register for)

Understanding Priority Registration

For the first few of weeks of each registration period, SPH uses Priority Registration with certain courses to ensure that there are enough spots for students who need them during that term. This means that, each term, registration into certain courses is limited to students in certain, designated programs for a short period. It is important that you register promptly each term, and that you make every attempt to follow the term-by-term course plans laid out below and in your academic program guide. While you are not required to follow the planning guides, doing so will ensure that you get the courses that you need each term. You can view draft course sequencing for the 2022-23 program guides on the SPH website. Guides will be finalized by the beginning of the new academic year. Links: Certificate Guides MPH and MS Guides PhD Guides

To accommodate incoming students, Priority Registration for Fall runs through July 17. This means that you should register for courses below, by July 17.

- During the Priority Registration period, registration into certain courses is limited to specific programs.
- If you don't register during your Priority Registration period, you may not get into courses during the term you need them.
- The schedule indicates Priority Registration restrictions in the Registration Notes column on the right. Please note that "Priority" means that courses are limited to that population during the Priority Registration period. "Restricted" means that only that/those populations may register for the course (without instructor permission).
- Just because your program requires a course does not mean that you always have Priority Registration for that course. You will have Priority Registration for it during at least one term, but not during all terms.
- If you try to register for a course that has Priority Registration but your program has not been designated the priority population, you will get an error message that references Field of Study Restriction. After the Priority Registration period has ended, if you try again to register for the course you will get in if there still are seats open.

Your program has priority registration for the courses listed below for Fall. Please register for them by July 17.

*Asynchronous online sections of core courses EPI 512, BSTA 525, ESHH 511, HSMP 574, and PHE 512 are offered during the summer term. New students in the online programs may opt to take one or more core courses in Summer 2023, instead of in Fall/Winter/Spring. Summer course offerings typically, though not always, have lower enrollment than Fall/Winter/Spring sections.
